A Community Visitation Program

Offered in Partnership by the Association of Idaho Cities, Idaho Rural Partnership,
Idaho Department of Commerce, Idaho Housing & Finance Association, Mountain States Group, Boise State University, University of Idaho, & U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development

Community is a process, a condition, and a state of being in which people are working for their own futures and the future of their town. The purpose of a community review is to assess and increase the vitality and wealth of a community.

Community vitality means not only jobs and income, but resiliency and the capacity to respond to both negative and positive change.

Community wealth refers to the assets of the community, including all types of infrastructure, crime rates, climate, scenery, environmental quality, individual skills and community spirit.

The community review process is based on the notion that visitors to a community can offer a fresh perspective and make observations by listening to community members and touring the community from an outside perspective. Participating in a community review allows a community to see itself through the eyes of an objective observer. The success of a community review requires a significant degree of commitment and participation on the part of the community.

How does the Community Review work?

- A visiting team of diverse community leaders tours, interviews, surveys, and observes a community based on a wide range of indicators and a few focus areas identified by the community.
- The visiting team listens to community leaders and citizens and fosters an open dialogue about the future of the community.
- The visiting team uses its experience with community development to offer suggestions and strategies to increase the community's health, wealth, and vitality through an interactive meeting and a subsequent report citing specific referrals.
- The visiting team continues to follow up with the community.

Who conducts the Community Review?

A visiting team of 15-18 people are selected based on their skills and the focus areas identified by the community. Generally this may include a few mayors, city councilmembers, or city officials from other Idaho communities. Organizations likely to be on the team include: Association of Idaho Cities, Idaho Rural Partnership, Idaho Department of Commerce (Gem Community, regional specialists, or community development professionals), Local economic development district representatives (Ida-Ore, PAC, SICO, CEDA, etc.), Local Resource Conservation & Development teams, Local Job Service management, Local USDA Rural Development management, Utility or Bank representatives, & volunteer consultants. Other organizations might include: U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development, U.S. Economic Development Administration, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, U.S. Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service, Idaho Department of Agriculture, Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, Idaho Commission on the Arts, Idaho Historical Society, Idaho Division of Environmental Quality, & University staff. Additionally, representatives of the Governor's Office, Legislature, or Congressional delegation may participate in the process.

FOCUS AREAS

The visiting team will be divided into three small groups for parts of the Community Review, in order to better examine the whole community. Each group will have a particular area of focus, although observations and feedback will likely extend beyond this area of emphasis to incorporate larger themes. Focus areas might include some combination of the following: Local Economy, Infrastructure, Housing, Community Design & Identity, Land Use Planning, Education, Transportation, Communication, Health Care, Natural Resources, Arts, Historic, and Recreation Resources, Seniors & Youth, and Civic Life & Community Involvement.

After having a chance to talk internally, the visiting team meets with community leaders and citizens and gives an oral presentation of observations and options. Within approximately two to three months, a written report is sent to the community with detailed observations and expanding upon possible action items and resources. The community responds by describing how the community review was beneficial, detailing what action it plans to take, and offers improvement suggestions to the community review process. In follow-up meetings between community leaders and members of the visiting team, additional action strategies and ideas are brainstormed and developed. The following sample schedule suggests a two-day Community Review process.
